...BY SUPPORTING THE WORK OF ORGANIZATIONS THAT STRENGTHEN FAMILIES

ITCF is proud to outline our work, including funding, training, and technical assistance to organizations that work to help families and children in Idaho. Our work is built on a commitment to building strong communities and families. We ensure that our network has access to the newest movements and resources. We ensure that our network is connected to each other and to national prevention efforts. We ensure that our network has access to the newest movements and resources. We ensure that our network is connected to each other and to national prevention efforts.

ICTF is proud to continue our work...
...BY SHARING EACH OTHER'S EXPERTISE

Over two hundred prevention practitioners from around Idaho gathered for four days in Boise – Jan 30–Feb 3 – for the 11th annual Family Matters Conference, sponsored by the Idaho Children’s Trust Fund. Keynote speakers included Dr. David Barlow, Senior Vice President of Casey Family Programs at the National Child Welfare Research and Training Center; and Dr. Susan Bradley, new CEO of the Boise-based Families in Schools. The conference featured 95 workshops and a first-time showing of the film Resilience. Participants heard from experts and shared their own stories and expertise with each other.

...BY RECOGNIZING INDIVIDUALS AND ORGANIZATIONS WHOSE WORK EMBRACES PREVENTION OF CHILD ABUSE AND NEGLECT

Family Services Alliance of Southwest Idaho (FSA), the year’s recipient of the Ed Van Dusen Legacy Award, provides trauma-informed victim services to children and parents since participating in a multiyear, comprehensive efforts to educate and increase confidence and self-efficacy among survivors of sexual abuse.

...BY INCREASING AWARENESS THAT EACH OF US CAN HELP PREVENT ABUSE AND NEGLECT

Resilience, the Training Institute closed with a panel of parents and young adults who have negotiated their new world as parents raising their children with different rules or as children adjusting to a new culture. They understand what they can do to create a safe environment. They know that they need to report if they suspect abuse. They are the leaders in our communities.

...BY CREATING SHARED STRATEGIES

Reaching the Tipping Point in preventing child abuse was presented in October 2017, Darkness to Light announced a new effort to bring awareness to their prevention efforts and bring a hopeful message that we are all in this together to make sure that all kids leave the brightest future possible.

Resilience Matters: Eliminating Child Abuse and Neglect Fatalities. We can all do our part to share awareness. This work includes partners leading to a multiyear program of workshops, films, and screenings of two films, Resilience and Paper Tigers, which are helping to open the door for more intensive work. Trust Fund staff have been working with Washington, DC, City employees who had recently taken the training.

Parents and clinicians alike have been inspired by the story of one of the 300 children who was never identified.

In the past five years, over 750 children have received services from the Boise, Buhl, and Parma School Districts for their comprehensive efforts to educate their teachers and other school personnel on how to prevent child abuse. Last summer in Meridian a sexual abuser was caught and arrested because of the actions of Meridian City employees who had recently taken the training.